A further complication in this Quay plan arises from the necessity it imposes of putting senate members on record concerning statehood. Several senators do not want to have to vote again, and every energy of the leadership is now directed toward avoiding show of hands. Quay is taking advantage of all these considerations, and seemingly intends to give the republican organization a good deal of trouble if they are to avoid an extra session, as all unite in desiring to es. There was another effort to compromise today on a plan admitting Arizona and New Mexico as one state, with Oklahoma to be admitted as provided in the original house bill. Immediately after the adjournment of the of the evening. senate the republican friends and opponents of statehood legislation, as the during the day, met and agreed to a proposition of the compromise charac-The seventeen republicans who have been following the lead of Senator Quay agreed to the proposition, and the republican senators who have been leading the fight in opposition to the bill expressed a willingness to come to an agreement on that basis. The compromise plan was suggested to the democratic senators, and was very promptly turned down. Without exception, every democrat in the chamber insisted that under no conditions would be accept the proposition which looked to the union of New Mexico and Arizona as one state. This was something of a surprise.

The arrangement contemplates putting the capital at Santa Fe, which would be a concession to New Mexico. It is said that a bill embodying this idea has already been drawn, and that It may also provide for a division of the new state when it has a population of 300,000 people, each of the present territories becoming states.
